Dear FCC: I was very disappointed when I heard that XM Radio was under fire by the NAB for providing their subscribers with local weather and traffic; I have had XM Radio in my vehicle since December and now I can't imagine being without it. I am purchasing a second unit this week for my home. XM Radio offers a refreshing alternative to local radio and with the addition of weather & traffic, I feel that it now offers a full menu. What this comes down to is good wholesome competition. Subscribers choose XM Radio because of the variety of their programming and so much so that we don't mind paying for it. Failure to compete in radio stunts improvement and growth, which very often leads to stale programming. I appeal to you to allow the growth and expansion of satellite radio and permit them to continue with these aspects of their programming which are extremely beneficial to the public and their daily activities.

Thank You,
Paula Cox
